THIS MONTH'S TOPIC

THE POWER OF POSITIVE LANGUAGE AROUND FOOD

The way we talk about food can have a big impact on how we feel about it and how we take care of our bodies. When we use positive, respectful language around food, it helps us build a healthier relationship with what we eat. A healthy relationship with food means not feeling guilty or stressed about what we eat but instead enjoying food as something that nourishes and energizes us.

Words have a lot of power. The language we use can shape our thoughts and feelings. If we call food "bad" or "unhealthy," we might start feeling bad about eating it. For example, saying things like, "I shouldn't eat this," or "this is so unhealthy," can make us feel guilty when we enjoy our favorite foods. But when we use words like "balanced" or "nourishing," it reminds us that food is not the enemy — it's something our bodies need to stay strong and healthy.

We often talk about food in ways that make it seem like some foods are “good” and others are “bad.” While it's important to make choices that provide our body with the nourishment it needs most of the time, it's not helpful to label food as all good or all bad. All foods can be good for us in one way or another. Whether it's the nutrients it provides us or the enjoyment we get from eating it. The key is to focus on balance, not perfection. If we can learn to talk and think about food without judgment, it can help us feel more relaxed and less stressed about eating.

Talking about food in a mindful way can also help us enjoy it more. Mindful eating means paying attention to what we're eating, how it makes us feel, and how much we're eating of it. When we use words like “enjoying,” “savoring,” or “appreciating,” we remind ourselves to slow down and notice the flavors, textures, colors, and smells of our food. This helps us be more aware of when we're full and prevents overeating. Instead of rushing through a meal or eating while distracted, we can focus on the experience of eating and truly enjoy it.

Language around food is also important in the way we talk about it with others. If we constantly talk about dieting, weight loss, or food rules, it can create stress and pressure around food. Instead, focus on how food makes us feel good, how it helps our bodies grow, and how it brings people together. When we talk about food in a positive, relaxed way, it can help create a more supporting environment for everyone.

The words we use around food matter. They can help create a healthy, positive relationship with food. By avoiding judgment, focusing on balance, and practicing mindful eating, we can build a better relationship with food.
